The Bloomfield Record.

[Official Paper of the Township.]

S. M. HULIN, Editor and Proprietor.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1874.

Miss Sarah A. Ward, daughter of J. C. Ward, of this place, has been admitted to the National Academy of Design.

Dr. W. H. White has been elected School Trustee to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of Rev. A. C. Frissell.

Dr. B. F. Richardson advertises to deliver a lecture, in Jacobus' Hall, Montclair, this Friday evening. Subject, "The Origin and Death of the Devil."

Hon. F. H. Teese of Newark and Ex-Mayor Ferry, of Orange, will address the Democracy of Bloomfield on political questions in Friendship Hall this (Friday) evening.

A meeting of the officers of the Republican campaign club of Bloomfield is called by order of the President and Executive Committee, to meet at the rooms of the Mabel Association over the Post Office, on Saturday evening at 8 o'clock. A full attendance is particularly urged.

It gives us pleasure to be able to announce the safe return home of townsman Francis De Gress, after a six-months business tour in Central and South America. We publish elsewhere an extract from a letter of his to a Bloomfield gentleman, received a few days ago, which will be found fully as interesting and instructive as was a similar letter given some months ago.

The charter election in Newark on Tuesday resulted in a Democratic triumph as to the choice of Aldermen. The general vote on Water Commissioner, resulting as it did in a majority of 727 for the Republican candidate, would seem to indicate the actual strength of the two parties, and that in the coming November election, Mr. Halsey will carry the city by a good majority.

A late Bloomfield improvement is the observatory recently erected by Mr. Bartholomew near his residence. It is a building about twelve feet square and thirty feet high, built in a thorough and artistic manner. On the ground floor is located the "Berkeley Printing Office" of Wm. H. Bartholomew. It is probably as extensive and as complete in appointment as any amateur office in the State. A stairway leads to the second story, which is arranged as a reception room. It is lighted by three large windows, carpeted, furnished, hung with pictures, etc., and makes a most attractive apartment. The sides and ceilings are not plastered but ceiled with narrow dressed pine and stained. Two more flights of stairs lead to the top of the tower, which is surrounded by a neat balustrade. An extended view in every direction is afforded from this summit, an excellent achromatic telescope of large size lending assistance to the vision.

The old established Copper Works of Hendricks Bros., located on the Second River, in Belleville, were destroyed by fire early on Tuesday morning, involving a loss in buildings, machinery and stock of about $60,000, which is covered by insurance. The fire is believed by the owners of the works to have been caused by incendiarism, as the time of discovery flames burst out in the engine room and in another place, distant more than a hundred feet from the point first named. On account of the presence of considerable quantities of oil and other inflammable material together with the heavy timber work used in supporting the machinery, and in construction of the buildings, the fire burned with great intensity and fierceness. It was found to be impossible to stay its progress. The great heat caused a neighboring brick building, the refinery, with a slate roof, to take fire, and all except the outside walls were destroyed. Nearly fifty men are deprived of employment, but the work of rebuilding will be resumed at once.

Gas in Orange.

A large meeting was held in Orange on Tuesday night, composed largely of wealthy, intelligent and influential residents who assembled for the purpose of taking action against a law passed by the last Legislature, which changed the method of levying the tax for street lamps. The old way made the property on the streets where there were lamps pay the tax. The new law assesses all the property in the city for the illumination of only a few streets. Mr. L. L. Condert presided at the meeting and Messrs. George Spottiswoode and Thomas Beaman were the Secretaries. Mr. Spottiswoode stated the object of the meeting and the subject was thrown open for discussion. Mr. Robert Wetmore spoke in terms of unmitigated disapproval of the law, which was so partial in its effect and which was got through the Legislature in such a surreptitious manner that the author of it till this day is unknown. It did not receive the sanction of the city authorities nor was it even known to them or the citizen generally until after the Legislature adjourned. He trusted the meeting would take such action as will secure its repeal at the next Legislature. Mr. F. S. Stallknecht, made remarks at length. He did not so much object to paying a tax if they got the light but when they paid their tax and got nothing in return then he opposed it on the principle that it was unjust. A preamble and resolution were then read to the meeting condemning law and petitioning the Common Council to adopt such measures as well cause its repeal. They were adopted unanimously and the meeting adjourned.

Republican Primary Meeting.

There was a large turn-out of the Republicans of Bloomfield at the meeting held on Wednesday night. There was a full representation of the younger workers of the party, while the presence of quite a number of the older heads and leaders denoted that the spirit of enthusiasm not developed in previous meetings of this campaign was now fully aroused.

John A. Whitehead, Esq., presided, and County Clerk Beford acted as Secretary. Under this organization the meeting proceeded to vote fo delegates to the County Convention, with the following result:

Thomas W. Langstroth, Horace Pierson, Thomas Oakes, David W. Smith, Thomas E. Hayes, S. Morris Hulin.

The following were then elected delegates to the Assembly Convention:

Jacob F. Randolph, J. Banks Reford, Theo. H. Ward, Chas. H. Bailey, Willard Richards and G. T. Moore.

After the election, Mr. Richards moved for the formation of an association for concerted party action during the campaign, and that the meeting proceed to elect the officers necessary to such organization. The motion being carried, there was a general desire that Mr. Whitehead should be elected President of the club. He declining in favor of a younger man, Mr. Willard Richards was nominated and unanimously elected. Four Vice Presidents—one from each road district—Messrs. A. G. Yerance, S. J. Potter, W. K. Williamson and A. C. Marr were elected, together with Fred. O. Pierson and L. S. Lee, Secretaries, Horace Dodd, Treasurer, and an Executive Committee of 18, as follows;

John Sherman, C. H. Bailey, Lee Stout, W. B. Chambers, W. S. Freeman, H. Cadmus, Chas. Huff, J. W. Baldwin, John A. Whitehead, Thomas Oakes, H. K. Benson, G. T. Moore, T. E. Hayes, Jas. Berry, Geo. Cadmus, D. Close, S. M. Hulin, J. B. Reford.

While a Committee was engaged in making a list of nominations for the above officers, Mr. Randolph moved that Mr. Whitehead make the first Bloomfield Republican campaign speech, which motion was carried by acclamation.

Mr. Whitehead then made a short but stirring impromptu address, speaking pointedly upon the general issues and exigencies of the present canvass. He said he had been with the Republican party from its inception, and believed in its soundness. He thought if there ever was a time in the history of our politics when good men were wanted in office, it was now. These were perilous times in the political annals of our country, and the party now in power needed its best men at the front. He had been one of the fathers of the Republican party, and had never renounced his allegiance, for he believed its principles were right; hence he recoiled from union with the Democratic party, which had identified itself with interests that were detrimental to the nation. He warmly advocated Republican principles and measures, and denounced the supporting of corrupt or weak men in any party. There had been examples where self-seeking and ambitious men had gone to the topmost heights of power and had degraded and abused their positions to further selfish ends. It rested with those he saw before him to prevent such occurrences. We want different men—better men than some of those we have put in office—men who cannot be warped by flattery or bought with money. Laws may be enacted against bribery, but they will not repress the evil. We are to remedy it by sending to the Legislature and to Congress representatives who cannot be touched by bribery. Our duty is to be here at these primary meetings, see that good men are put in nomination for office, and that they are elected.

Fall Advertising.

Among our new advertisers this week are Watson & Co., clothiers of 813 Broad street, Newark. Special inducements in overcoats are offered by this well known firm. We know whereof we speak in saying that they have a magnificent assortment and at prices that suit the times. Give them a call.

Corey & Stewart, the leading hatters and fur dealers of Newark, are now doing a brisk trade—made so by that popular plan of their's—presenting purchasers of goods with tickets to visit Newark's Industrial Fair. Such an arrangement cannot fail of being popular.

The proprietor of the "Bloomfield Surprise" advertises the opening of his new fall stock of goods, special inducements in prices, etc.

R. F. Jolley & Co, 829 Broad street, Newark also send us this week a new advertisements. We can unhesitatingly recommend their place as one well worth patronizing. They keep nice goods.

Messrs. Potter, of the Bloomfield Mills, announce that they are now manufacturing their celebrated buckwheat flour. We know we are entirely safe in recommending it is a tip top article. Our grocers, we believe, usually keep it throughout the season. If not, a line by mail to the manufacturers of this and other brands of choice family breadstuffs will meet with prompt attention.

The Lecture Room of the Presbyterian church was crowded on Sunday morning last, it being known that the pastor, Rev. H. W. Ballantine, had returned and would be present. He preached an interesting sermon on Christian charity. It was announced that until the completion of the church repairs there will be union services of the two Presbyterian churches in the Westminster chapel on Sunday evenings. Also preaching in the Lecture Room as heretofore on Sunday mornings. We are requested by Superintendent Ward to state that the Sunday School will assemble in the M. E. Church immediately after the morning service next Sunday. The repairs in the church are progressing rapidly, and it is hoped to have the building ready for occupancy within four weeks.

Letter from South America.—No. II.

I do not remember if I gave you a description of San Iago in my last letter. But it will bear repeating, as I consider it the finest city in South America. It is the capital of Chile, is about 144 miles from Valparaiso, said to have about 200,000 inhabitants. The streets are paved with Belgian pavement, wide and well kept, the houses all look clean and are well built. In the centre of the city is a hill called Santa Lucia, which until a few years ago was the refuge of thieves and robbers, a barren pile of rocks. The present Mayor, a Mr. Mackenna, who has traveled or lived in Europe and the United States for many years, commenced to improve it a few years ago and now it looks more like one of the toy fortresses or summer residences we see, than anything else. A splendid drive and walk runs up this hill and at every turn and angle you see fountains, cascades, shrubbery, flowers, statues etc. The hill being about 200 metres high, this drive runs around the mountain several times. On top is a fine restaurant, swings for children, shooting gallery, tables and benches, in fact everything to make it pleasant. The Chilenos are hard workers, excepting at Chichi-time, which was just about the time when I was there. Chichi is the juice of grapes, and when the grapes are gathered and the wine is made, this juice or chichi is sold everywhere. It is perfectly pure but intoxicating. The people are very fond of it, consequently a great many show the effects of it. The weather while in Santiago was very cold, in fact I felt the cold so much that I had to wear a double suit of underclothing in addition to my overcoat. I found our minister, Dr. C. A. Logan, to be a splendid gentleman. The opera house in Santiago is one of the finest I have ever seen, not very large, but well constructed and splendidly finished. Chile with its mineral and agricultural resources improving and developing every day, draws all its rich people to the Capital and that accounts for its flourishing condition. During my stay in Valparaiso, I experienced enough earthquakes to satisfy me for some time. We had 9 I believe; it rained very much and everybody was afraid of a general land slide, as the high hill, back of the business part of the city, and covered with private residences, had commenced to slide and taken four houses down with it. In ten years from now, the R. R. from Valparaiso to the Atlantic (Montevideo) will be finished and then we shall be able to travel easier. I left Valparaiso on the 11th of July and arrived in Callao and Lima, Peru, on the 21st of July, ten days coasting all the way up, stopping at 15 harbors, and going ashore at most of them. They say that they have only 150 working days in Peru, and I believe it: because, although the anniversary of their independence is the 28th of July, they commenced the celebration on the 25th and it lasted until August 3d, including Sundays. Processions, bullfights, masquerade balls, horse-races, target shooting, military-reviews, the unveiling of a magnificent statue representing Victory, in honor of the repulse of the Spanish fleet May 2d, 1866, etc., it took up the whole week, so you see to attend to business was was out of question, as all the stores had to be closed, not a Gov't. officer to be found at his his office. I also took strip up the Aroya Rail Road, which is probably one of the most difficult works of Civil Engineering in the world. The average grade of the road is 4 per cent. and in 75 miles it rises to an altitude of 15,000 feet, where it crosses the Andes. It is finished to within about 10 miles of the summit, and will be done in about two years.

The R. R. King of South America, Henry Meiggs, is building it for the Government, and he employs American mechanics, engineers, bridges, etc., wherever he can. You can imagine the steep grade, when the employees come down the road, about 65 miles, on hand cars at the rate of 40 miles an hour, which is dangerous traveling.

Left Callao on the 14th of August, had a good captain and a good steamer coming up, so that the time passed pleasantly. At Panama I was invited to a grand ball given by the officers of the American Man of War "Richmond," Admiral Collins, to the Panamenians. The steamer was decorated with flags and evergreens, the guns had been moved forward, and at 3 o'clock the young folks commenced to dance, keeping it up until 7 P. M. Not being very fond of dancing with the thermometer at 100 deg., I kept very quiet and spent the time pleasantly looking on. The President, Mr. Miro, was present with his wife and enjoyed himself very much. We also had a reception on board of the English steamer, which brought me up from Callao. It was confined to only a few danced and sang and had a good time generally for a few hours. I left Panama on the 27 of August for Aacpulco Mexico, and I'm just about half way, 10 days out. We stopped at Punte, Arenas, Costa, Rica, a place of about 1500 or 2000 inhabitants, and which exports 300,000 bags of coffee every year. Our next port was San Juandel Sor, in Nicaragua, formerly the port of embarkation of the California travelers. It is of ir harbor, but only three houses, the principal exports are about 800 or 1000 tons of pearl shells annually, which sell in Paris at about $400 per ton. Our next port was Corinto in Nicaragua, also a small place of about 500 inhabitants. Nearly all the business is controlled by an American, Mr Robt. Gray, of Philadelphia, principal exports sugar, coffee, cedarwood, hides, etc.

Our next port was Amapala, Honduras, next La Union in Salvador. La Union is quite a place of about 1200 inhabitants. The American Consul, Mr. Flint, is very glad to see anybody from the States. The principal business in all these ports consists in importing for the large inland cities, and export the produce of the country. A great deal of indigo is exported, also hides and deer skins. Our next port was La Libertad also in Salvador and at present we are anchored off Acajusta, Salvador. As we proceed North the harbors become worse and more inaccessible; the swell of the sea is so strong and the breakers, even at the dock so high, that a the last two ports we had to use chairs and steam cranks to embark and disembark, which is rather unpleasant and a little dangerous. The wharf or dock at this port (Acajusta) is 30 feet high and still the breakers often wash over it. Our first officer, Mr. Mandel of of New Bedford, was badly injured this morning, falling through the hatchway.

While I'm writing this, two active volcanos are in full view, the "Santa Anna" and "Isalco" and it is a curious sight to see the smoke rolling up continually. Away to our left we see the mountains of Guatemala, 15,000 feet high. Our steamer one of the P. M. S. S. Co., is very slow, only 9 miles an hour. We shall probably reach in Acapulco in 9 days, from there I shall probably go on horseback to the City of Mexico, another 10 days, journey. If anyone thinks this is a trip of pleasure let him try it on; but as I often told you, there always must be some pioneers in commercial as well as agricultural pursuits, and I'm one of the former looking up commerce for American products, and have established first class establishments in Valparaiso, Chile, with an agency in Santiago, also one in Lima, Peru, with an agency in Callao, another one in Panama. If I had time to visit the interior cities of Central America, I might work up something there, but it is all uphill work. On our continent we have just about 5 per cent. of all the commerce that is done. All the products which I have seen shipped, such as coffee, indigo, copper, silver, etc., goes to Europe and in return they send dry goods, clothes, furniture etc., etc. Even our sewing machines are being driven out of this market by those made (nearly as good and for less than ⅓ the price) in Canada and Europe.
